Original Miscellany.

FALSTAFF A MAN OF COURAGE.

You scarcely meet a whipster who will not talk to you of the character of Sir John Falstaff with as great confidence as if he had studied it. I have myself conversed with multitudes who imagined themselves perfect masters of Shakespeare's idea of the character. About five-sixths of them had only seen the fat knight represented on the stage in the tragedy of the First Part of Henry IV. and perhaps a few of these in the comedy of the Merry Wives of Windsor; but read it they never had, or, perhaps, even thought of reading it. Though here, let me once for all remark, that he who has seen any of Shakespeare's plays only represented on the stage does, in fact, know little more than nothing about them. Of the other sixth, some may, perhaps, in consequence of having seen them represented, have read the Merry Wives of Windsor and the First Part of Henry IV. But how many of that sixth part have read the character in the Second Part of Henry IV. or in the tragedy of Henry V. in which last the recital of his death scarcely yields for wit and humor to any thing in his life, is the question—probably few. How then should the character be generally known, or the intention of Shakespeare in it be perfectly understood?

Yet, it is astonishing how any person of ordinary perspicacity could see even the First Part acted without having some doubts of Falstaff's being really so utterly destitute, as most people think, of animal courage. We there see him in the thick of the battle of Shrewsbury—in the very places where Hotspur, Douglas, Sir Walter Blunt, &c. &c. fight and shed blood. Surely some courage was necessary to support him there; and so far from being in terror, he still has even in the midst of battle presence of mind to indulge in that idol of his heart, wit and humor, even on that subject.

Falstaff. Hal, if you see me down in the battle and bestride me so, 'tis a point of friendship.

P. Henry. Nothing but a Colossus can do these things. Say thy prayers and farewell!

Falstaff. I would it were bed-time, Hal and all were well.

P. Henry. Why thou owest Heaven a death.

Falstaff. 'Tis not due yet. I would be loth to pay him before his day.

But, to return to the point of Falstaff's reputation for courage, among his contemporaries in these plays, from whose opinions of him Shakespeare's idea is more accurately than in any other way to be collected.

In the Second Part of Henry IV. lord Bardolph, (not Falstaff's friend of the burning nose, but lord Bardolph, a man of the world, and of sense and observation) one of the Hotspur party, comes to Northumberland's castle with premature and, as it afterwards turns out, erroneous intelligence respecting the battle at Shrewsbury, and tells Northumberland that

The king is almost wounded to the death; And in the fortune of my lord your son, Prince Harry slain outright; and both the Blounts Killed by the hand of Douglas: young prince John, And Westmoreland, and Stafford, fled the field; And Harry Monmouth's BRAWN, THE HULK SIR JOHN, Is prisoner to your son.

How came Falstaff into this list? Why, common fame put him there. But if he had not been a soldier of repute—if he had not been brave as well as fat, it would have been more germane to the matter if this lord had left him to be put down among the baggage or the provender. If he had been a coward he never would have got into such a place or such company—but from lord Bardolph's account it is evident that the world had its eye on Falstaff as an officer of merit; and to believe him less we must necessarily suppose that the king and the Prince of Wales, and all the court and the leaders of the army, were deceived in their opinion of him. In short, Falstaff held such a stand in general opinion that he was expected by every one to be found in the field.

Again, in the same play, (the Second Part of Henry IV.) Falstaff taking his ease in his inn at Eastcheap, is interrupted by a summons to the court on the breaking out of the rebellion. Peto, entering, says,

There are twenty weak & wearied post-boys come from the north; & as I came along I met and overtook a dozen captains, bareheaded, sweating, knocking at the taverns, And asking every one for Sir John Falstaff.

And in a minute or two after Bardolph comes and informs him further,

You must away to court, sir, presently; a dozen captains stay at the door for you.

Now, I would ask, for what purpose so very peremptory a message should be sent, and, for fear of missing Falstaff, by so many officers of respectable rank in the army? Why, evidently, for no other purpose imaginable but to give his opinion as a military man of skill and experience concerning the measures necessary to be taken.

I cannot conclude this part of the subject without laying before the reader the very words of the play as written by Shakespeare, touching the surrender of Colville of the Dale, a most furious knight and dourous enemy, to the bare name of Falstaff.

Falstaff and Colville meeting in a forest. Falstaff. What's your name, sir? of what condition are you? and of what place, I pray?

Colville. I am a knight, sir, my name is Colville of the Dale.

Falstaff. Well, then, Colville is your name, a knight is your degree, and your place the Dale: Colville shall still be your name; a traitor your degree; and a dungeon your place—a place deep enough; so shall you be Colville of the Dale.

Colville. Are you not Sir John Falstaff?

Falstaff. As good a man as he, sir, whoever I am. Do you yield, or shall I sweat for you? If I do sweat, they are drops of thy lovers, and they weep for thy death: therefore rouse up fear and trembling, and do observance to my mercy.

Colville. I think you are Sir John Falstaff; and in that thought yield me.

A GREAT MAN HAS FALLEN.

By a gentleman direct from Nashville, Tenn. we have understood that a duel was fought just before he left there, between generals Adair and Jackson, in which the latter was killed. The particulars of this lamentable occurrence will be given in detail as soon as received.

RICE CROPS.

The rice crops in the vicinity have seldom presented a more favorable prospect of an abundant harvest than during the present season. The weather has been very favorable for harvesting, and large supplies of this valuable grain will be brought to market at the usual time.

A considerable portion of tide land was this year planted for cotton, and has produced to great advantage. [Intel]

The U. S. schr. Despatch, under the command of Lt. E. A. F. Vallette, four weeks from Norfolk and one from Smithville, N. C. came up to town on Wednesday last, for the purpose of being gravely. The Despatch brings several officers of ability, who are engaged by government to explore the coast from Cape Fear river to Port Royal, including the Frying-pan shoals. The commandant and several other officers in an open boat are now pursuing the business of their tour in ascertaining and explaining the situation of the most dangerous shoals at and near the entrances of our river. From the discoveries already made, and the talents of the officers engaged in this expedition, much information of importance to the commerce of our country may be expected. [ib.]

New York, Oct. 16.

By the fast sailing schr. Gertrude, capt. Butman, in 35 days from Bordeaux, the editors of the Mercantile Advertiser, received papers to the 3d of Sept. inclusive.

We learn that the markets were good at Bordeaux for sugar, coffee and cotton. We also learn, that the harvest in the South of France was abundant and well got in, but in the North, it was indifferent; and that the vintage was short, and not more than one third of the usual crop was expected to be got in.

October 17.

Extract of a letter, dated Port Glasgow, Aug. 15, from Capt. Anderson, of the Phoenix, of Kincardine: "I have peculiar satisfaction in informing you, that on the 30th of April last, I was the means, under Providence, of rescuing from a lingering death of cold and hunger, 14 of my fellow creatures, part of the crew of the schr. Carlew, from Waterford, bound to St. John's, Newfoundland. On the 24th of the same month, this vessel had got inclosed among the ice, and unfortunately having struck a large mass of it, stove in her bow in such a manner, that half an hour afterwards she went down. The passengers and crew succeeding in getting on the ice; and soon after the master, mate, three of the crew, with five passengers, got into the boat, with the intention of making for St. John's, the remainder being left on the ice to await their fate. Fortunately at 7 A. M. on the day mentioned, lat. 47, 20, N. long. 46, 30, W. I observed them in their perilous situation, and immediately made all sail towards them. At nine A. M. I brought the ship as near them as circumstances would permit, and with one of our boats happily succeeded in getting them on board (nine in number) but learned with regret that they only formed part of the crew and passengers, five more having been separated from them on a different piece of ice, two days after the accident. Those I rescued, however, informed me that they had seen their companions two days before; and though they could give me no very accurate idea of the direction from want of a compass, I was led to understand that they might probably be six or seven miles off. I accordingly kept the ship all day close in with the ice, but saw nothing of them. At night I stood to the offing, and towards morning tacked and bore down in the direction I was most likely to fall in with the unfortunate men. At six A. M. we had the pleasure of observing something among the ice like a signal, but a thick haze coming on, we again lost sight of it. At half-past seven it cleared a little, and we were now near enough to discern distinctly the objects of our anxious search. I lost no time in running the ship as near them as we could with safety, and, I am happy to say, succeeded in getting them all safely on shore. These unhappy men had often been tantalized with the sight of different vessels before we fell in with them; and while I mention this, I cannot insist too strongly on the duty of all masters of vessels examining very minutely the ice, when they happen to get amongst it, as there is always a possibility of some of their fellow creatures being in the same dreadful situation as those I had the fortune to rescue. Their shipmates who went off in the boat reached St. John's after a tedious passage of twenty days, during which they encountered much suffering and privation. Their only subsistence was seals, and so precarious was this mode of keeping themselves alive, that for ten days they had only one."

Albany, N. Y. Oct. 15.

A correspondent informs us that five wagons loaded with the household goods, men, women and children of this sect, passed through Cherry Valley, Otsego county, on the 25th ult. on their way to the state of Ohio. The men and women were dressed in the same style of those who passed through Sussex, (N. J.) and were as they alleged, followers of the same prophet. They call themselves the true followers of Christ. Their pretended prophet came from Canada a few months since, and is a man of austere habits, and a great fanatic. His followers are not yet numerous, but it is thought he will increase them. He rejects surnames, and abolishes marriage, and allows his followers to cohabit promiscuously.

The men eat their food in an erect posture, and the women when they pray, prostrate themselves on the ground, with their faces downward. They frequently do penance for sins, and seem to make uncleanness a virtue. They allege that their prophet has not changed his clothes for seven years. There was with the party above described, a deluded woman who it is said, had always sustained a fair character, and who left a husband in affluent circumstances, and a family of children, to follow this prophet. It is probably the object of the leader of this sect, to draw as many after him as possible, and to form in some of the western states a new settlement similar to the one made by Joanna Wilkinson in this state.

INDIAN AFFAIRS.

By advice received from Fort Meigs this day, under date of the 22d September, we learn that a very large body of Indians were convened at that place, for the purpose of concluding a treaty with the United States. The Indians had been collecting from about the 10th of September, to the date of our advice, at which time upwards of three thousand, young and old, male and female, were at Fort Meigs. Their council opened on the 22d and it was believed, would continue until the first week in October—perhaps a few days later. They consist of numerous delegates fr. various friendly tribes. The object of their convention it is said, is for the purpose of discussing and arranging a treaty by which certain reservations of land, at present held by them, may be ultimately conveyed to citizens of the United States, in exchange for other and more extensive tracts further west, and better calculated for Indian hunting grounds than those which they at present occupy. It is not probable that more will be done at this meeting than to decide on the question of removal, and possibly the district of territory to which they would remove. The terms & manner would then be a subject of a future convention.

We learn that the young are generally favorable to a removal, but that the old Indians prefer remaining on their present reservations which are contiguous to or in the midst of a numerous civilized population. In the result of this treaty many of the citizens of N. York are deeply interested, and none more so than the inhabitants of Buffalo. In the vicinity of that delightful & flourishing village there are about 700 Seneca Indians. They have two small villages on Buffalo creek, which occupy about 80,000 acres of the finest land in the state of New-York. They are an idle, drunken race, that continually prowls thro' the village of Buffalo, presenting to the view of the inhabitant and the sojourner, scenes the most disgusting and degrading to our nature. So far, therefore, as our western brethren are interested in the discussions pending at Fort Meigs, they have on this, as on every other question, our best and warmest wishes for their success. To remove the Senecas from Buffalo would add much to the growing prosperity of that village.

It is mentioned in a London paper of August 24, that the ship Mary, arrived at Madeira, the 31st July, from Newfoundland, was boarded on her passage between the islands of Coru and Flores from the insurgent schooner Patriot, John Chase, commander, who enquired whether she had seen any of his squadron, he being commander, having a pendant and flag with five stripes, blue and white alternately. The captain of the Mary was told that they held the islands of Coru and Flores in a state of blockade; but if she was in need of refreshments, she had liberty to go in. The insurgents also informed, that they had taken three very valuable prizes that week, and the Patriot had then on board sixty thousand dollars in specie.

Extract of a letter dated Pernambuco, Aug. 30, 1817, to a gentleman in this city.

Our government, after going to an immense expense with the expeditions to the river La Plata, will have to withdraw from it at the remonstrance of the powers of Europe. A few vessels have been taken, but nothing to what we expected. Our convoy has sailed for Portugal, and being under constant apprehensions, seldom a vessel sails without Cotton is again up to $11—per arroba (2 lbs.) undispatched—Sugar, white $5 50; brown, 2 50 per arroba, average prices with export duty included—Coffee, none—Hides, very scarce. Flour, upwards of 4000 bbls. in market, & a mere drop, as every other article of provisions, with which our market is completely glutted.

Great losses must inevitably be sustained by those who have returned hither lately, as their cargoes cannot be disposed of even at a very considerable sacrifice, and on the returns, no freight can be gained at the present high prices. Besides, we have an excellent crop of Mandioca and Corn this year, which does away in a great measure, the necessity of looking for supplies of provisions elsewhere. Under these circumstances, the importation of 1000 barrels of Flour would always overstock our market, provided it was bare of this article on its arrival. ibid.

Extract of a letter to a commercial house in Baltimore, dated Liverpool, Sep. 9.

Enclosed you have the state of our markets for your produce to the 1st instant. The brisk demand for cotton continued last week, in which time the sales amounted to 15,000 bags; of this, 7,000 are computed to have been taken by speculators, at prices of Bowed and New Orleans have advanced 1-2d to 3-4d per lb. and other sorts 1-4d to 1-2d per lb.

American flour has been moving off very regularly; but the last few days proving fine, and every appearance of a continuation of favorable weather, late prices have been with difficulty realized. At to day's corn market, grain of all descriptions was completely at a stand. About 3,000 bbls. Canada and N. York flour were offered at auction, when the former went off at 44s per bbl. and the latter withdrawn at 47s per bbl. and is since held at 48. otherwise, the business of this day consists of a few small sales of Philadelphia at 50s. and New-York at 48s. per bbl.; rye flour 30s. but possibly for a quantity less would be taken.

The demand for tobacco from the trade for Ireland, has been pretty regular during the last month, but little has been done for exports—a few low Georgia, Carolina and Kentucky at 4 1-2 to 5 1-2 per lb. constitutes the whole. Prices of all sorts have declined, but low qualities more in proportion—holders of that description pressing sales at reduced prices. Rice has been in good demand throughout last month, both on speculation and for export, and prices have been improved 4 5s per cwt—the import only amounts to 250 tonnes, and the stock in first hands very limited.

The import of flour in August has been 89,000 bbls. Prices have fluctuated a few shillings, and have left off at about 2 p. bbl. above those of the beginning of the month: as to future prices every thing depends upon the weather, which has now a settled appearance. We have experienced a good demand for put ashes throughout the month, in consequence of the reduction in price, in which there is a little alteration. Pearls have got into few hands, and the stock being small, they ask 5 3 6s per cwt. advance, which at present buyers do not seem disposed to accede to. The import of ashes since Aug. 1 has been 12,500 bbls.—opposite 14,530 in the same period last year. The demand for Quercitron bark has revived within the last fortnight: since then there has been a good business done both by dealers and speculators at 20 a 21s per cwt. for good and fine Philadelphia; the latter quality cannot now be procured under 22s. per cwt. The imports, so far this year, have been 2,800 bbls.—in the period last year 4,488 casks. We experienced a very good demand for turpentine in the early part of the month, when about 3,000 bbls. were sold to distillers at 12s. 9d. per cwt. for ordinary, to 15s. 6d. for very good quality; holders now ask 16s a 17s. cwt. Tar has been in very limited request during the month of Aug.

THE BRIEF REMARKER.

Two English poets, of eminent, but very unequal genius, are diametrically in opposition to one another in their descriptions of the same great object—The World.

"Wherefore did nature pour her bounties forth

With such a full and unwithdrawing hand;

Covering the earth with odours, fruits and flocks,

Thronging the seas with spawn innumerable.

But all to please and sate the curious taste,

And give unbounded pleasure unto man?"

On the contrary the disappointed Dr. Young, contemplating the World through the spleen and gloom of his own humour, describes it as an abode altogether dismal.

"A part, how small, of this terraqueous globe.

Is tenanted by man! the rest a waste, Rocks, deserts, frozen seas, and burning sands,

Wild haunts of monsters, poisons, stings and death!

Such is earth's melancholy map!"

A melancholy map indeed; but that God, not the true one.

There are some who seem to make it a point of conscience to speak disparagingly of the world they live in, as if they thought it were honouring the maker to despise his workmanship. True enough, it is an evil world; and why? It is not so of itself, but by reason of the evilness of the race of moral beings that inhabit it. It is the moral, rather than the natural map of the world, that is unamiable and hideous.

The original frame of the work was good: a commodious, beautiful and superb mansion, altogether fit for the abode of an order of sinless creatures, compounded of the rational and the animal natures. And notwithstanding the frightful change it underwent by means of the apostasy, it is still itself, a good world; that is to say, it is a building well adapted to the condition of the guilty tenants—"prisoners of hope;"—who are destined to pass a short residence in it. What though the "thorn and the thistle," the noxious weed, and the prickly briar, grow up spontaneously, whilst plants and trees that are good for food must be cultivated with great care and toil? And what though man is impelled to eat his bread in the sweat of his face, and to be daily mustering up the resources of his mind and body in order to reduce stubborn matter to his use and convenience? All this is entirely befitting his present condition, to wit, the deprivation of his affections, appetites and passions, and his state of trial; it precludes the possibility of general idleness, which would render him more vicious by many degrees than he now is. What though cruises and disappointments, sickness and sorrow, are common to the lot of man—and there is such an emptiness or deficiency in even the best of his enjoyments that not a single individual of the whole race is in all respects happy? These very evils are preventives of moral evil. Through the divine influence, in a thousand instances they curb our passions, humanize our dispositions; and bring our minds to a right state of recollection and to new and better purposes of action.

And finally what though besides that worldly enjoyments are ever mixed with alloy, and are ever unsatisfactory, life itself is frail and fleeting?—What though death is daily moving down his thousands and tens of thousands without distinction of age or degree? Awful as is this law of mortality, and clearly evincive as it is of original transgression, it is a dispensation of which there is moral necessity. If men were in this world immortal, or held their lives upon a score lease for hundreds of years, in all probability a great proportion of them would extend their transgressions far beyond the present bounds of human depravity. The consciousness of the shortness and brittleness of life bridle in avarice and ambition. The fear of death is a strong curb on appetite and passion. Death breaks in pieces gigantic schemes of oppression, delivers the world from unfeeling oppressors, scatters abroad the unrighteous hoards of avaricious worldlings, and is the great humbler of upstart pride and arrogance.

It is, I repeat, the moral condition and conduct of the tenant, that mars the beauty and poisons the comforts of the tenement. The promised new earth wherein dwelleth righteousness, would be no unhappy world even with the physical form and properties of the one that we inhabit.

Were the heavens above as black as sackcloth, or glaring with light of a frightful hue, and were the earth beneath us presenting to our senses nothing but objects of disgust and horror; then indeed the world would correspond with the rueful descriptions, which querulous genius has given it. Then indeed the following lines of poetry would possess no less truth than beauty:

"For Ah! what is there of interior birth,

That breathes or creeps upon the dust of earth,

What wretched creature, of what wretched kind,

Than man more weak, calamitous and blind?"

But the truth is, though fallen man is weak and blind, and sinful, yet his earthly condition, so far from being calamitous beyond that of all other creatures, is attended with a great many circumstances of comfort and delight.

The earth even in its present state is filled with the goodness of the beneficent Creator; and Man is the object of his especial care and bounty. Is it nothing, that above & around us, light and colours, with their correspondent shades, are infinitely diversified, to soothe and gratify the eye?—That we are furnished with such sweet and melodious sounds to charm the ear? That the earth affords such a variety to delight the palate? That it is decked with the enamel of innumerable flowers of varied colors and delicious fragrance? That by a nice admixture of the different species of air, the atmosphere is so exactly fitted for respiration? That the silk worm spins to adorn, the sheep bears a fleece to warm, and the ground itself yields the rudiments of fine linen to array our frail bodies? That, in all parts of the world, there is furnished a supply of medicaments for the particular diseases of the climate? That Fire, Air, and Water, along with a great variety of Minerals, are made in so many ways, to minister to the convenience and adornment as well as to the subsistence of our race? Is all this aggregate of earthly benefits and blessings to be accounted as nothing? Shall Man loaded as he is with so many unmerited temporal blessings, complain and fret because they are mixed with natural evil? Especially shall he do it when a full moiety of the calamities he suffers are brought up, not by the direct hand of Providence, but by his own follies and crimes?

To love the world more than him who made it, and life more than him who gave it, is that worldly-mindedness which is base and criminal. But a moderate or subordinate love of the world, of life, and of all its innocent enjoyments, along with lively gratitude to the Donor, is what becomes our rational and moral nature.—Whereas on the other hand, to think or speak contemptuously of the common gifts of Providence, betokens as little of humility as of thankfulness.

Strange advice of a Lawyer.

Mr. T. an eminent counsellor in the state of New-York, lately deceased, had acquired a large fortune by his profession, and as he had no children of his own, he had adopted a daughter and two sons belonging to a sister. Among some other charges and bequests, the following was most prominent. "I give unto my daughter—and to my two sons,—and to the sum of 25,000 dollars each, provided that neither of them follow the degraded profession of a lawyer, priest or prostitute. Yet if Providence in his wisdom shall have predestinated them to these callings, my next prayer is that the lawyer take no fee, the priest no salary, nor even the prostitute an

On Friday evening last, Mr. JAMES ALLISON, Sen. a native of Ireland, in the 70th year of his age. For several months past, his bodily sufferings had been great in the extreme, from the nature of his disease; but in the midst of all his sufferings, his peace flowed as a river—his confidence in the promises of the gospel, unshaken—his faith in the great atonement of Jesus Christ strong to the end. Surrounded by his affectionate family, he left the world in full assurance of immortality and eternal life in those blessed regions where the wicked cease to trouble and the wearied are forever at rest.

For Sale,

A TRACT of land, lying on the North Fork of Quantico Creek, and only two miles from the town of Dumfries (known by the name of Clifton) containing about 250 acres. About two thirds of this tract is in wood—a part of the cleared land well enclosed. There is on this tract a good dwelling house, stables, &c.; and convenient to the dwelling house a grist mill, containing two pair of stones—one of burr, new, five feet diameter; the other Cologne. The mill is lately built. Every part of the gear new, and completely fitted for merchant work. The mill better secured from floods than any I am acquainted with; having but 3 feet of dam, with a short race, to admit of fall for a twenty-four feet overshot water wheel. In fact, the land is of good quality; the situation handsome and healthy; the stream a good one; and the mill new, spacious, and well finished, and lying in the most direct road for a great part of the produce that comes to Dumfries to pass it. Possession can be had immediately, and the terms known by application to me, at Dumfries.

Sully for Sale.

THIS estate, situated in the county of Fairfax, twenty two miles from Alexandria, and the same distance from Georgetown, contains about seven hundred and fifty acres. Little River Turnpike passes through it half a mile from the dwelling house. The situation is handsome, and remarkably healthy; the water is good and abundant. The field, present a good surface for cultivation, and those, now untillied, are covered with red clover. The orchards are very large and thrifty; the collection of table fruit is choice and various. The mansion is spacious and well constructed; the out-houses are conveniently situated, and the whole have been lately thoroughly repaired and painted. The farm houses, which are all nearly new, are expensive and excellent in their kind.

For a gentleman of leisure this would be a delightful residence; and a profitable estate for an active farmer. The title is indisputable, and perfectly unincumbered.

A number of well taught orderly young men, with good stocks and farming utensils of all kinds, and the crops of the present year, if desired, will be at the command of the purchaser.

James Kennedy & Son,

BOOKSELLERS,

KING-STREET, ALEXANDRIA,

RESPECTFULLY inform the public that they have just received from

Lee's Medicine Store,

No. 46, Maiden Lane, New-York, a fresh supply of the following valuable MEDICINES:

Hamilton's Worm-destroying Lozenges.

Which have within sixteen years past cured an immense number of persons of both sexes of every age and in every situation, of various dangerous complaints arising from WORMS, and from obstructions or foulness in the stomach and bowels.

This medicine bears no analogy whatever to others of similar titles so commonly complained of as operating with violence; on the contrary a particular excellence of this remedy is its being suited to every age and constitution. It contains nothing but what is perfectly innocent & is so mild in its operation that it cannot injure the most delicate pregnant lady or the tenderest infant of a week old should no worms exist in the body; but will without pain or griping cleanse the stomach and bowels of whatever is four or offensive, and thereby prevent the production of worms and many fatal disorders. The lozenges are particularly efficacious in carrying off all gross humours and eruptions, feverish and bilious complaints, and are the safest and mildest purgative that can be used on any occasion.

Description of Worms, and the symptoms by which they are known. Worms which infest the human body are chiefly of four kinds viz.—The Terebra or large round worm; the Ascariides or small round-worm; the Cucurbitina or short flat white worm; and lastly, the Tenuis or tape-worm, so called from its resemblance to tape. This is often many yards long and is full of joints. It is most hurtful and most difficult to remove.

Among the symptoms attending worms are—disagreeable breath, especially in the morning; bad and corrupted gums; itching in the nose, and about the seat; convulsions, epileptic fits, and sometimes privation of speech; starting and grinding of the teeth in sleep; irregular appetite, sometimes loathing food and sometimes voracious; purging with slimy and fetid stools; vomiting; large and hard belly; pains and sickness at the stomach; pains in the head and thighs and lowness of spirits; slow fever with small and irregular pulse; a dry cough; excessive thirst; sometimes pale and unhealthy countenance, and sometimes the face bloated and flushed.

Persons afflicted with any of the above symptoms should have immediate recourse to Hamilton's Worm Destroying Lozenges, which have been constantly attended with success in all complaints similar to those above described.

A dose of this medicine given occasionally during the warm season, will effectually prevent "the vomiting and purging of children"—a dreadful disorder, which annually destroys thousands of the infant part of our citizens. It is likewise the mildest and most certain remedy known, and has restored to health and strength a great number when in an advanced stage of this fatal complaint. Particular and plain instructions are given for every part of the necessary treatment in such cases.

Children generally take this medicine with eagerness; having a pleasing appearance, and an agreeable taste.

The Restorative Powder for the Teeth and Gums.

For the cure of agues, remittent and intermittent fevers.

At the place of sale pamphlets may be had gratis, describing cures performed by the above medicines: the number, importance and respectability of which, fully justify every article of this advertisement.

For the prevention and cure of BILIOUS AND MALIGNANT FEVERS is recommended

HAIN'S ANTI-BILIOUS PILLS THIS Medicine has been attended with a degree of success highly grateful to the inventor's feelings in several parts of the West Indies and in the Southern and Middle States, &c.

The testimony of a number of persons can be adduced, who have reason to believe that a timely use of this salutary remedy has, under Providence, preserved their lives when in the most alarming circumstances.

Facts of this conclusive nature speak more in favour of a medicine than columns of pompous eulogy founded on mere assertion.

It is not indeed presumptuously proposed as an infallible cure, but the inventor has every possible reason that can result from extensive experience for believing that a dose of these Pills taken once in every two weeks during the prevalence of our bilious fevers, will prove an infallible preventive; and further, that in the earlier stages of those diseases their use will very generally succeed in restoring health, and frequently in cases esteemed desperate and beyond the power of common remedies.

The operation of these pills is perfectly mild, so as to be used with safety by persons in every situation and of every age.

They are excellently adapted to carry off superfluous bile and prevent its morbid secretions—to restore and amend the appetite—to produce a free perspiration and thereby prevent colds which are often of fatal consequences. A dose never fails to remove a cold if taken on its first appearance; they are celebrated for removing habitual costiveness—sickness at the stomach and severe head-ache—and ought to be taken by all persons on a change of climate.

They have been found remarkably efficacious in preventing and curing disorders attendant on long voyages, and should be procured and carefully preserved for use by every seaman.
